

PAT'S LEARNING ANGELS

Newsletter

March 8, 2007

This SILLY SCIENCE
Week we MADE SCARY
SCULPTURES of body parts.
Tiarnan and Patrick Worked on the HUMAN Heart. I say it was fantastic fun, but
horribly hard

by Tiarnan

This week we have worked on counting what seemed like millions of pennies to figure out how many a large jar will hold, it was actually only 851 pennies.

Megan is far from finished with her text book but is fighting through the problems to finish it.

Ryler is jumping through multiplication.

Tiarnan says he likes to wizz through ADD sheets.

Ella is flying through problems with adding.

kids
counting
pennies

Megan

ELLA

Erva

slaves and master

slave escaping through the woods.

Vivian

we continue OUR study of the underground railroad! This wonderful week we read several super stories about the
 escapes of slaves.
 I sat on the ^{edge of} my seat
 listening to the books
 I was reading. It felt like I was living back in that time. It was sort of scary and I'm glad I'm not a slave but I live with my great mom and dad in my warm, safe house.

Patrick

Vivian

Terribithia
by Vivian

We are reading Bridge to Terribithia.
It is a story of a lonely boy (Jesse) and his new friend. They made a mystical kingdom called Terribithia.
We are thinking of going to the movie on Friday, and we will discuss the differences between the book and movie. Please send your child with 10 dollars.
Clare

VIVIAN

There is no school
next week because
of spring break.

Tomorrow we bid a fond farewell to our fluffy, fuchsia, flamingo Vivian.
She is returning to St. Louis. We wait anxiously for her return visit.

