

Pat's Learning Annex

October 12, 2006

This wacky week of weather started out warm, but by Wednesday it was snowing. We didn't mind too much because we stayed warm with our homemade sauce de pomme (apple sauce). We learned all the French terms for making applesauce. It was fancy fun using our amazing apple peeler to peel and crazily cut the apples we picked from our terrific tree. Then we ate the wiggly, worm peels. (Our apples do not have worms)

Then we cooked the apples and ate the mouthwatering treat. We say Merci boucoup to our professor Steve for the interesting idea and the amazing apple peeler. We also learned how to ask for things in French and answer with what we had.

Luckily it wasn't frigid at the perfect homecoming parade. We marched and showed off our vivid van. We made bold body prints to decorate it. We also made a beautiful banner and the banner holders had crimped necks after the parade.

We wrapped up our pirate unit for now (still have some writing to do with them) by watching a video on true Caribbean pirates. It was interesting and showed all the colorful pirates we studied about. We are ready to start studying Halloween Horror. We will kick off this unit by reading some Edgar Allen Poe tomorrow, FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH.

Next week we start a yowling yoga class on Wednesday at 1:00.

Today we are walking to the library wearing hats, scarves and gloves.

Until next time,
Kreative Kyler, Reader, Creature Clare and Titan Tiarnan.
