

Pat's Place for Punks

Newsletter
December 14, 2006

This wonderful week our Elegant Eagle Ethan returned from savage surgery on the east coast. We were all astounded and excited to have him back so quickly.

Our budding book for the hospital continues to bloom and grow into wonderful work of art. After weeks of hard, horrendous work, we will deliver it tomorrow afternoon. We hope the healing children in the hospital will be horrendously happy to see our second installment in the Ivy and Jacob series.

We have also been writing ambitious "I am" poems, that capture a little bit of ourselves on paper. These will be used for a special present soon.

Our wonderful professor in Fantastic French granted us each our own copy of a French picture dictionary. We were amazed at how much French we know already.

Terrific Tiarnan also returned from the West coast. After two week of lounging in the sun, going to Disneyland and the Aquarium of the Pacific, Tiarnan and his dad returned to gloomy Iowa City. He's joyful to be back with us, but a little rusty in the work department. We are confident that Pat will whip him back into shape.

Next Tuesday, December 19, we will celebrate our Winter Party. We have been making super secret partner notes for each other for the past few weeks. Yesterday we went shopping and bought books for our partners. On Tuesday during the party we will reveal our secret identities. We will also go to a movie (hopefully Eragon) in the afternoon. We will need $5.00 to cover the movie.

Don't forget us when you are doing your holiday shopping. We have included a list of boxtops4education shopping sites and products.

That's all for now.
Pat's Punks